

GLADSTONE IS 81 TO-DAY.

And It's Also the Grand Old Man's Golden Wedding.

High Festival Prevalent In and About Hawarden Castle.

THE GRAND OLD MAN OF GREAT BRITAIN, the real Gladstone, celebrated his eighty-first birthday yesterday in the morning at Hawarden, where he has remained for the last thirty years. As usual he remained at Hawarden, where he received congratulations by telegraph and mail from all parts of the world. From his political friends and associates the congratulations are more than ever plentiful and enthusiastic.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone vainly attempted to keep the festival within the limits of a family affair. The whole village of Hawarden is decorated, and the inhabitants are trooping to the castle.

WILLIAM GLADSTONE.

With numbers of visitors from abroad, arriving by every train.

A memorial fountain was unveiled this afternoon in the presence of a large and enthusiastic assembly.

AN AVALANCHE OF CONGRATULATIONS. (DUNBAR CABLE NEWS SPECIAL.)

HAWARDEN, Dec. 29.—In spite of an increased force in the post-office and post-telegraph stations here, recruited for the occasion, the unfortunate employees are nearly buried beneath the avalanche of telegrams and letters that began nearly a week ago and have hourly increased in volume until this, Mr. Gladstone's eighty-first birthday.

The usual religious services have been held in the church, which with its Christmas decorations, seems to have been especially adorned for the occasion.

The Grand Old Man is in the best of health, and whatever clouds may hang about the political horizon, he has evidently decided that neither that nor any other consideration shall mar his happiness on the present festive occasion.

MR. PARNELL MUST RETIRE.

Prospects for an Irish Party Compromise Fading Away.

(DUNBAR CABLE NEWS SPECIAL.)

LONDON, Dec. 29.—It is now almost as difficult to locate Mr. Parnell, at any particular hour of the day or night, as it was to find him in undisputed possession of the leadership of the Irish party.

Several Paris journals have already announced his arrival in that city, but from a well-informed source of information it is learned that he is in Hastings, recuperating after his arduous Irish campaign.

It is doubted whether he is going to Paris at all, as the prospect that Mr. O'Brien will be able to effect a compromise has been steadily fading since the latter's arrival in the French capital.

The American delegates' general reserve, and his oratorical and amiable utterances, when he does speak, are regarded by some as unfavorable signs; while others interpret them as indications of an inclination to recede from the strongly anti-Parnell position taken by him while in America.

As a new organ, the Inappreciable, somewhat strengthens the latter hypothesis by the nervous, hysterical anxiety it manifests in all references it makes to the subject, and by its frequent iteration of Mr. O'Brien's opinion, which from America, that Parnell's continued leadership meant destruction to the Irish cause.

Justin McCarthy also finds employment in again and again calling the attention of the public to the fact that the language used by the Irish leader during the Kilkenny campaign, coupled with his insulting references to his former party associates, has rendered compromise impossible.

Indeed, if strong language could prevent such a consummation, it has long since become the order of the day.

Referring to the general subject, an anti-Parnell member of Parliament thus expressed himself to-day:

"It is utter nonsense to suggest anything of the kind, for we won't have it. Before the Kilkenny struggle a compromise was within the range of outside possibility, but since then the idea has become absurdly impracticable and utterly impossible. The hour has passed, never to return.

"The only way out of 'Darkest Ireland' now, is the complete and unconditional retirement of Mr. Parnell. We don't object, if he gratifies his calling himself 'leader' of the Irish people and lastly, 'Irish chief.' For all we care he may call himself Grand Lama of Avovala, but we have completely and everlastingly done with him."

REMARKABLE PROTEST FROM CORK. (DUNBAR CABLE NEWS SPECIAL.)

CORK, Dec. 29.—A joint letter has been addressed to William O'Brien signed by the Mayor, the Mayor-elect and the ex-Mayor, who have held office during the past five years.

The subscribers assert that it is the opinion of the people of Cork that Mr. Parnell's position has been seriously assailed by English statements, and that greatly as they appreciate Mr. Gladstone's services and deeply as they feel their obligations to the Liberal party of Great Britain, they absolutely and emphatically deny the right of his leaders to dictate to the Irish people who shall be his leader.

Will They Confer at Boulogne? (BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.)

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Freeman's Journal announces this in relation to Mr. Parnell will meet William O'Brien at Boulogne to-morrow, a conference having been arranged.

His faithful supporters, Messrs. R. D. McDonald, Kenny and Scully, have gone on before.

FASSETT CLINGS TO BEATTIE.

Still Investigating the Street-Cleaning Department.

Could Hans Clear Away This Snow for $675,000?

Senator Hendricks, the real Chairman of the Fassetts Investigative Committee, has come down from Syracuse to run the proceedings of the Haystack Trust this week.

He has Senators Abrams, Birkett and Stewart to help him out, and as usual, Inquirer Evans will run the meat-axe end of the investigation.

Senator J. Ross Thompson, who is the devoted friend of the street-cleaning department, has been called to his country seat at Elmira to recuperate.

Mr. Evans held a consultation with Senator Abrams, and it was decided to make the snowstorm the text of to-day's investigation.

Mr. Evans sent a messenger post haste over to Commissioner Beattie's office with instructions to the street-cleaning department to remove all the snow from this 300 miles of streets in the city if the Commissioner does his duty.

Mr. Evans first put Stephen H. Moore, one of Mr. Beattie's foremen, on the witness stand.

Mr. Moore said he had been waiting for a man in the street named Hans, who he said was a Commissioner, at the instance of Mr. Hagan, his deputy.

Recorder Smythe and Judge McGuire had given him a recommendation to Mr. Hagan.

"Are you a member of the organization?" inquired Mr. Evans.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness frankly.

"What previous experience had you had in street cleaning?"

"I had been employed by contractors on the Broadway road, in street cleaning, in New York, Australia and on the Central Railroad between New York and Piquetteville."

The witness then gave a detailed description of the work in the Seventh ward, where he said there were many difficulties encountered.

"Did you ever discharge any one for incompetence?"

"I recommended two men for discharge,"

"For what reason?"

"For incompetence, principally."

Mr. Moore said he tried to clean about eight miles of street with that number of men.

The next witness was Daniel M. Simpson, also a foreman having charge of the district of the street-cleaning department, Sixth street and East River.

Simpson said he had several laborers under his supervision and that he must be expected to keep ten miles of street clean.

The witnesses were divided into two squads of four men, who cleaned half the district each.

Can four men sweep two and a half miles of street in a day in New York?"

"They do it, and do it very well, I think," replied the witness, who was asked if he knew of any other street-cleaning men.

"What was your first occupation?"

"I was a driver for four years and a half."

"What did you do then?"

"I was appointed City Marshal by Mayor Oakes Hall."

"But that was eighteen years ago; you must have been in office then for twenty-two years?"

"Well, I guess you are right."

"I went into the Excise Bureau as an Inspector for three months. Then I was appointed Inspector of the Excise Bureau, and I was in that position for two months after Mr. Beattie went out of office, and on April 1st I was appointed City Marshal by Mayor Oakes Hall."

DID HE TAKE OTHER LIVES?

Krullish, the Fiendish Murderer, Suspected of More Crimes.

The fiendish murder of Wenzel Croupa by Frank Krullish at Bohemianville, near Bayville, L. I., has brought out stories that create the suspicion that Krullish has been guilty of other murders.

It is now believed that Krullish killed the seventeen-year-old son and namesake of Constable Joe Shaker, who arrested him. Young Shaker went into the woods Nov. 10 to get a load of lumber. He took his gun with him in the expectation of shooting squirrels.

The horse wandered home during the afternoon, drawing the wagon piled up with wood. Lying on top of the load was young Shaker, bleeding and unconscious.

He was found by the woodsman, who carried him to the house of the constable. Although his gun lay by his side in such a position as to create the impression that he could not have shot himself, the coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental shooting.

Krullish is said to have been prowling about the woods that afternoon.

Four years ago a red couple named Schindler were brutally murdered in their home at Breston. Their bodies were mutilated in the same manner that young Croupa's was. Krullish left Breston, where he had been living, immediately after the double murder, and from remarks which he made it is now suspected that he committed that crime also.

The killing of Croupa was in revenge for his having, as Krullish says, told persons in Bohemianville that Krullish had been compelled to leave Riverhead because officers were after him.

Since Krullish has lived in Bohemianville about six weeks—he and Croupa had been such in each other's company. The wife was about the settlement drinking together. Christmas. Friday night they met again, and after several drinks became quarrelsome.

About 8 o'clock they agreed together to fight over their differences, and repairing to the woods near by had a fight, in which it appears Krullish was the victor.

After the fight Krullish was found by the police, and he was taken to the hospital. Krullish then covered the face of the fallen man with his hat and proceeded to cut off his right ear. Then he severed a finger from his right hand.

The sight of blood frenzied him, and with his heavy knife he proceeded to cut the man's throat, and not satisfied with that stabbed him in the abdomen.

The murderer, who is a short, thickset man, at once repaired to the house of Constable Salak and told the officer that he had murdered a man, and as evidence gave the constable a knife and a finger.

On Saturday afternoon the afternoon papers printed a story that the then unidentified victim of Krullish was a woman.

This information was sent out by the Union Press Exchange of this city, an association which sometimes furnishes Long Island news.

This Evening World, on receiving the information, sent a special correspondent to Bayville, who learned the facts in the case, which was the victim was Wenzel Croupa, a laborer on Bayville (L.I.) farm. In the Evening Extra the EVENING WORLD printed the correct story.

The fact of the misstatement is to be deplored, especially by those papers which print the story, and who are able to receive attention to the matter.

They were unable to correct the misstatement, which they, of course, would never have done into type had they not believed it to be true.

THE SURRENDER OF BIG FOOT

A Dramatic Giving Up by the Wily Hostile Chief.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Despatches from Wounded Knee Creek, S. Dak. give full details of the surrender of Big Foot band of Sioux, which took place yesterday.

The morning had dawned bright and warm as a summer's day, and soldiers, with their overcoats off, were busily talking about the day weather, when all at once Little Hattie, the Indian scout who had started out at daybreak, was seen riding at a breakneck pace over the ridge towards the camp, waving his hat.

In a few minutes he was at Major White's quarters with the news that Big Foot was only eight miles away.

Boots and saddles were sounded, and if ever a lot of men got out of camp in a hurry it was the men of the Seventh Cavalry.

In a few moments they were hurrying over the ridge towards the camp, waving his hat.

Major White said that he must surrender or fight.

A flag of truce at once went up from the hostiles and Big Foot surrendered his band of over one hundred and fifty warriors and two hundred and fifty women and children.

The prisoners were then marched over to the old camp on Wounded Knee.

The battalion surrounded the Indian camp in order to keep tight guard over them until more troops should arrive.

The prisoners included the Sitting Bull gang that fled after their chief's death.

Scouts just to report that Short Bull and his braves are on their way to the agency and are in camp now at the Catholic mission, only six miles away.

Prospect that He Will Speedily Recover from His Attack of Pneumonia.

The condition of Banker Kelly, who has been very ill with pneumonia at his home in West Thirty-fifth street, was reported this morning to be very much improved.

It is thought by the physicians that if the improvement thus noted continues, Mr. Kelly will be able to resume attention to his business in another week. He is seventy-nine years old.
